

Global Health Volunteer Programme

ESSENTIAL PRE-DEPLOYMENT TRAINING

3 – 5 March 2025

Victoria House, Capital Park, Fulbourn
& Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge

About the event

The Global Health Volunteer Programme: Essential Pre-Deployment Training is organised by Cambridge Global Health Partnerships and NHS England's Global Health Volunteer Programme.

This intensive three-day course is specifically designed for resident doctors in training who are planning to work or volunteer in low-resource settings outside the UK. The course includes seminars, practical sessions, case-based discussions, hands-on surgical skills and a course dinner. It will:

- inspire and equip you to work safely, effectively and ethically in resource-limited clinical settings,
- provide practical preparation that will get you ready for placements in resource-limited settings, and,
- increase your understanding and confidence in clinical and practical skills.

You will hear from a diverse range of speakers with extensive experience working in low-resource settings who will cover topics including:

- working in a different language and culture,
- resilience and self-awareness,
- ethical issues,
- paediatric and obstetric emergencies,
- adult medicine,
- managing infectious diseases including Malaria, TB and HIV,
- snakes and snakebites.

● What to expect

The first two days include classroom-based seminars and small group discussions, covering topics such as personal well-being, and the do's and don'ts of working internationally.

On day one, you'll hear from Global Health Volunteer Programme alumni, followed by the course dinner in central Cambridge where you'll have chance to chat more to the expert presenters and alumni.

On day two, you'll be able to choose two of three practical sessions: paediatrics, obstetrics, and adult medicine, allowing you to tailor your learning experience to your interests and work placements.

Day three comprises hands-on surgical skills training and group discussions at the Simulation Centre, Addenbrooke's Hospital and School of Clinical Medicine, University of Cambridge. It includes sessions on orthopaedic scenarios, chest drains, HIV and TB, and ethical issues.

● Registration

The Global Health Volunteer Programme: Essential Pre-Deployment Training is for resident doctors in training in England.

The event takes place in-person and you are encouraged to register early as places are limited.

The total cost of the course including dinner and skills training is £550.

Resident doctors in training can claim some costs from their Study Leave budget.

Registered attendees will receive a detailed agenda and information pack in early February, when you'll also be able to indicate your preferred sessions for day two.

Register through Eventbrite:

<https://pre-deployment-training-2025.eventbrite.co.uk>

For further information and booking queries please contact info@cghp.org.uk

